

Article 27: You Are Unlimitedly Creative

If you remember the matronly lady in Article XIII who insisted that the earth is flat, resting upon a stack of turtles "all the way down", then you won't be surprised to learn that at the next seminar, she was equally upset to hear the "smart-alecky" astrologer-turned-astronomer declare that comets are frozen balls of ice, ...and that the long tail is actually vaporized gas from the ice-ball. After all, as she declared, "Everyone else knows that comets are signal-fires from God warning about our sins and evil ways. Young man", she continued, "you're trying my patience ...and good nature! And I'm not so foolish as to believe that God throws snowballs at us!"

As you can see, this woman was being quite creative. Are you as creative in your life? Do you believe that events are warnings from God? ...that God is signaling you? ...or punishing you? Do you feel exposed and judged by God? ...or by others in your life? Is it necessary for you to protect yourself from their judgments and criticism? ...from your own judgments and criticism? Are you constantly defending and justifying yourself? If so, it's time for you to see yourself clearly.

In your life, you are omnificent, ...you have unlimited creative power. The universe around you provides the buildingblocks with which you create every aspect of your self and universe. Buildingblock-events are constantly available in the outer universe for you to use to create your world as you desire. For instance, the death of a loved one is not grievous, but you can certainly create that event as grievous ...if you desire. Events that are joyous for others may be incorporated as anguish or despair in your life, for you are the creative designer and builder of your self and life; ...but, as well, since all outer events reveal the self and life you are living, you created those outer buildingblock-events to use as personal building blocks. You are the creator of the self that creates the buildingblocks of the self that creates the buildingblocks and the self that creates..... Do you see how omnificent you are in your life?

At the beginning of this life, you creatively determined your genes, your family and the environment of your birth, your talents, and the strengths and weaknesses you have today through the beliefs, thoughts, attitudes, emotions, words, and actions you lived in prior lifetimes, ...and you are determining your future lifeseif at this moment, ...have you chosen wisely? ...as you truly desire? Do not misunderstand our example, you are not "causing" these things, you are the pattern of your genes/family/environment/talents/strengths/weaknesses, ...and from that pattern you creatively activate the genes and talents you desire, ...and you recall every aspect of family and relatives and events you desire as foundation stones for your self and life today, ...or as someone or something to criticize and blame or struggle against ...as you continue creating.

There are no special requirements you need for creating the self and life you desire, ...for you do exactly that at every moment. You are, and have in your life, what you have chosen with every belief, thought, attitude, emotion, word, and action, ...and what you do not have, that is because you have not chosen those things. Creation is not in the "causing", nor is it in what is created, having faith, being true, living "goodness", or committing intensely or passionately, ...it lies entirely within your manner of choosing, ...and it is the choosing itself. For instance, as you love, you create love in your self and life; as you resent or appreciate, you create resentment or appreciation; as you enrich or fulfill, you create enrichment or fulfillment; as you grieve, you create self-pity; as you understand, you create understanding; as you offer worth, you are worthy; and as you live meaningfully and purposefully, you create your meaning and purpose.

You are the creator, the substance of your creation, the purpose and meaning of your creation, and the creation itself,
...that is omnificence.

What are you creating in your self and life? Do you know and understand your creations? ...or are you creating one thing while believing you are creating something entirely different? Are you doing this in your relationships? ...in your activities and endeavors? ...in your spirit and future? ...in your self and life? Are you a wise judge of your creations? Should you create different buildingblocks? Have you created what you truly want in your self and life? What would you create anew? The universe's responsibility in all of this is to unconditionally and lovingly support you and your creations.

It is not easy to move beyond the familiarity and comfort of what you have created of and for yourself, even if those things turn out to be limiting and undesirable. You are in a perpetual partnership with all you have created. Stretch your creativity. You must not become too comfortable and complacent in your present creations and forsake the greater, finer, more enriching creations you've dreamed of.