

Article 29: You Created It! ...So Why Are You Complaining?

For several days after her last encounter with the astrologer-turned-astronomer, the matron-lady told everyone about "the uppity young man who insisted that God threw snowballs at the world". Of course, everyone had a hearty laugh, ...especially when the lady flapped her arms and insisted, "...next he'll tell us to fly like the birds." And, at the next meeting, that is exactly what "the smart-alecky young man" said: "Someday men will rise above the earth and travel in space to the moon ...and even beyond."

The matronly lady, now feeling supported by all of her friends, jumped to her feet and again challenged the astronomer. "Young man", she called loudly, "that's impossible! ...for everyone knows that no matter how high you rise, you will always fall back to earth." And then she added for everyone's amusement, "...And, young man, you're in for a mighty big fall, ...for God made things so we wouldn't rise too high and try to be Gods."

Encouraged by the snickering and laughter, after the audience quieted down, she added, "God punished Adam and Eve for trying to be like Gods ...and He'll surely punish you!"

Then someone in the audience repeated, "God made it so we would always fall back to earth if we rise too high, ...and you've certainly got a big fall coming to you!"

Feeling secure in her position, the matron-lady added, "You see? ...young man, you can't just create things as you desire them to be. You're being devious and dishonest with all of these trusting people, ...shame on you! But we're not so foolish, ...and we've exposed you!"

And no matter how hard he tried, the astrologer-turned-astronomer couldn't stop the snickering and quiet laughing.

Are you a scoffer in your own life? Are you expecting and fearful of "a great fall"? Well, you can relax, ...for in your life, you are omnipotent; ...you have unlimited power and authority in your world. You are all-powerful, ...for whatever you choose with every belief, thought, attitude, emotion, word, and action is emergently yours; ...it is simultaneous with the choice ...and is as the choice; there is nothing you need do to "cause" your choice to manifest, for in choosing, it is yours, ...it is you. Were the universe otherwise, you would be powerless to direct your own life, for, no matter what choice you made, you would then have to seek the benevolence of that which causes to fulfill your choices, ...and in that, you could never rely on having your choices, ...or the self and life of your dreams.

"But," you might declare, "I've chosen many things in life and didn't get them, ...so you're wrong. I'm not all-powerful!"

When you declare, for instance, “I WANT a loving relationship,” that is simultaneously fulfilled, ...for you have given yourself “want of a loving relationship”. If, however, you are truly willing to be and live that relationship, then make that choice with every belief, thought, attitude, emotion, word, and action. Don’t speak of your wants, live them, ...for as you live, that is your choice, ...not your words. What you have is what you have chosen, ...and what you do not have, that is because you have not chosen it; therefore if you are in want of a loving relationship, that is what you have chosen; ...but you can certainly make greater and finer choices ...and create an extraordinary life, by living all of your relationships lovingly. And if you choose not to have a loving relationship, or fail to choose one, the universe will equally honor these choices ...and not impose a loving relationship upon you “for your own good”.

In your world—in your spiritually mindful embodied self and life—you are the determiner of all things.

“What about accidents ...or tornados,” you might ask, “I certainly don’t choose them ...and I don’t create them, they just happen.”

No events are accidental or meaningless, ...and not understanding the situations in your life does not change this. All individuals involved in a tornado make that event in their life as they desire. Some people create it as fascinating and exciting, others as sad and desperate, still others make the event punishingly destructive, while a few individuals experience the transformations and creativeness of the tornado, and some just stand there in the path complaining about how unfair life is. Each person experiencing the same tornado exercises personal power and authority to create and live the event as he or she desires. What would you choose?

“But I didn’t choose the tornado, ...it happened to me.”

And if we look backward at the steps and events in your life, we will clearly see a continuous pathway of personal choices leading you directly to the tornado; ...and for those who missed these events, we will see a pathway leading away from the tornado. Each person makes his or her all-powerful choices at every moment and lives them.

What all-powerful choices are you making in your life? Are these choices consistent with the self and life you desire? ...or are you trying to “cause” something? What? Do you feel abused and mistreated by life? If so, you are creating the abuse and mistreatment ...and denying your own creation; but you don’t believe in your own power, ...do you? All things in life occur emergently so you can have the self and life you truly desire ...exactly as you choose with every belief, thought, attitude, emotion, word, and action, ...so you can live your omnipotent lifeself.

What other things are you denying and forsaking in your life? You are all-powerful, so you can deny and forsake whatever you choose, but is that wise? You believe you are not all-powerful because you cannot “move mountains”, ...and you think that is because you do not have enough faith. Do not underestimate your power so. Stop trying to be loving, ...be love. Appreciate yourself. By living against things you are living against yourself. You are unwilling to let others choose your self and life, yet when you resist others or struggle against them, they are controlling you and your life. Stop living by others' rules.

Have you ever wondered how you would feel and what you would say and do if in God's presence? How do you feel when alone? What do you do? You cannot escape your own omnipotence any more than you can outrun your own shadow. What is your life's job-description? There are no special requirements for being omnipotent in your own life, so, don't forget, ...in your life, you are omnipotent, ...but you still don't believe that, ...do you?

You are all-powerful to live or deny yourself!
