

Article 325: Is the Language of Reason Reasonable? -part 1

Early Greek philosophers, especially Socrates, set out to explore the language and description of an idea, experience, or situation with little thought given to where they were headed ...or in which direction they should travel, for the journey of mind was itself the enjoyment and fulfillment, ...however, by the Middle Ages, philosophers, following the lead and direction of religion, laid out definite purposes, principles, and goals for their pursuits and studies, and for life in general, and then sought ways to attain these goals.

The early Greeks however were not the free-thinkers and adventurers they pretended to be ...simply because they began with a premise or idea ...and their free-thinking wanderings through the language of thought and ideas led them in a complete circle, as your duality-language is prone to do, which never took them far from their beginning. In much the same way, though the philosophers of the Middle Ages set goals to get them out of "life's problems", their far-ranging duality-thinking merely brought them back to their beginning problems.

In either case, whether a goal is set afar as an overcoming ...or set up close as an idea, your goal and duality-language will work together to keep you going around in circles ...getting nowhere.

Consider evolution, it seems that only the occasional mutation advances ...while all others continue adapting to the existing DNA and memory•language within them, live for a moment in common misery or natural agreement, and die out, ...is that what you want to continue living? Are you willing to step out of duality-language, be a mutation, and be and live as you truly desire?

To step out of your dichotomylanguage-traps, you must step out of your DNA•language-traps from past lives, for the two are the same. Just as the language of DNA seems to prevent endless faulty variations ...and your language seems to offer endless possibilities, the reality is that "in use" both languages seriously limit you by protecting the status quo. If you want to expand, to think and live freely, and to move beyond your self-limiting beliefs and ways, you must step out of the self-imposed domination of your dichotomylanguage ...and guide your DNA language to finer concepts and expressions for you to embody. Remember, of necessity, dualitylanguage in any form creates and maintains birth and death.

Do you try to concede or ease your pain with addictive and self-destructive behaviors?

Visit our website at foreverlivingonline.net

Faith does not offer freedom or an adventurous life unlimited by goals or circular thinking ...because faith begins at a goal, as in “faith in God”, and attempts to achieve that goal by “being one with God”, ...however, though you probably don’t realize it, maintaining the beginning goal of faith prevents your ever achieving the second of being one with, for to come close to the second you must maintain the first, but to have the second you must forsake the first; ...this is your dichotomylanguage in action.

In Aristotle’s universe, a thing cannot exist and not-exist at the same time ...and his logic and reasoning and teachings are built upon this premise, ...and Christianity is founded upon Aristotle ...and Islam upon Christianity, yet Aristotle’s premise, as a premise of language ...not of fact, is incorrect, for today we know that a particle can both exist and not-exist at the same time. Can you care about someone and simultaneously be indifferent? ...or be angry at someone you love? All beliefs and teachings ...even those remotely founded on a false premise are false, yet you continue living distorted beliefs about yourself ...and which are “true” only because they follow the underlying structure of language, and you dismiss many enlightening things as nonsensical because they do not follow the pattern of language.

The sense of language is nonsense!

It is said that Aristotle’s universe of logic, reason, and experience, which we have continued, fortified, and expanded upon for 2500 years only exists in the universe of language, and that is true, ...it is further indicated that Jesus’ teaching of God’s universe of peace and love beyond this world is a completely different universe ...and this is not true, for the world of reason and the world of emotion are both trapped in the dichotomylanguage universe ...and are merely different reactions to the same language-struggle ...which does not resolve or move beyond the inherent futile distortions and misbeliefs of language. In fact, both reason and emotion maintain the underlying false limitations and universe of language.

Your language results the languagedself and universe in which you live ...and your languagedself and universe simultaneously substantiates and maintains your language ...and your beliefs•thoughts•attitudes•emotions•words•actions, thus you have sacrificed yourself to become your language, ...is that what you want to continue?

It is taught that soul is pure essence that continues after death, and it is also taught that soul is essentially physical ...and disperses at death,

...which belief do you subscribe to? Can soul be both? ...and both be “correct”? Obviously, in your duality language, soul as spirit cannot be both physical and pure essence ...and both disperse and continue at death, ...however, as thoughts and thinking (braining) are physical expressions of pure essence/mind, and as mind continues at death and particular brain thinking ends at death and disperses ...yet begins again at the next embodiment of mind, ...soul as mind, even in your duality language, can be both physical and pure essence ...and both disperse and continue at death.

Soul as spirit remains unknown,
Yet soul as mind is alive and knowably personal.

If you can understand that, in the past, cameras stored information of a scene in memory or in light-sensitive chemicals applied to glass plates or film ...and today this information is stored electronically in memory or on computer chips ...and can easily and instantly be downloaded to your computer and viewed there, then it should be simple for you to understand that the mindful information that is you is stored energetically in memory in every cell of your body...and also in allmind of the universe, ...and ever should your body deteriorate or decay, the mindful information that is you can be instantly transferred to another body and revealed as you.

You are what you mind from allmind.