

Article 93: Emergent-Energy

As you believe, you experience ...which confirms and strengthens your beliefs, ...which magnifies your experiences and reinforces your beliefs, ...which intensifies and quickens your beliefs; ...and 'round and 'round it goes constantly justifying your original belief.

In the same way, when we believed that light and energy were constant and continuous, tests "proved" they were uninterrupted waves. Only later was it shown that they are also a flow of individual photons of light or discrete quanta of energy. Obviously, light and energy function both "causative" (as a continuous wave) and "emergent" (as distinct constituents), so that, if you believe life is causative, you will experience that, ...and if you believe life is emergent, you will experience that, for life always offers you what you truly believe. The showing of discrete particles or constituent quanta of light and energy tried to reveal the emergent quality of life, but believing in causation, you continued your old experiences and beliefs. It's time to reconsider your old beliefs ...and experience life more fully and completely.

According to old theories, energy is treated solely as a wave, while matter is assumed to occupy a very specific position in spacetime and move in a continuous manner. According to quantum theories, energy is emitted and absorbed in tiny discrete events, thus energy behaves, in some situations, much like particles of matter (which Einstein "proved" was so when he demonstrated that gravity bends light in the same way that it attracts matter.) ...and particles are found to exhibit certain wavelike properties. Both waves and particles have a dual nature, ...thus particles and energy satisfy, or present themselves to suit, continuous waves of cause and effect or discrete quanta of constituents revealing emergent actions, ...whichever you desire.

Under cause and effect, the continuous wave-flow of energy may be directed, moved, projected, and blocked, ...however, as quanta, as constituents and emergent actions, energy may be selected and applied without the difficult and limiting cause/effect wave process. For example, believing that electrical energy is required in a cause/effect relationship to "ignite" the filament of a light bulb, wavelike electricity is directed over cumbersome wires to the bulb. Knowing that energy is quanta-like, particle-like, constituent-like will enable energy to be emergently transmitted and applied directly to the emergent-bulb or emergent-light without interference or blockage.

Do you really believe that light ONLY travels in a constant stream of particles or waves of energy from a distant star to you ...the observer? Or can your eye, acting as an emergent receiver-director, see a star even with a hand in front of your eyes to block the light? Can the light be "seen", emergently-so, even with the constant stream blocked? No doubt about it! ...for recently, science created an experiment in which particles appeared to move from one point to another without traversing the intervening space; therefore, I'd like to propose that light does not (have to) flow across the universe from a distant star, but can emergently appear to the receptor ...even if the light is blocked, for though the universe reveals "continuous flow" it is also following an emergent course ...or "emergent appearance" across the universe to the receptor without traversing the intervening space.

Years ago, Einstein predicted that traveling at or near the constant speed of light will slow time for you, such that, upon returning to your point of origin, you will be far into the future, ...of course, that is in the future of those left behind, not in your own future; ...but, just as your inner-space is the same as outer-space, in the future, you will be able to travel to the other side of the universe by "emergent-appearance" ...instead of following causative ways and lines through wormholes in space. In this, you will be moving to distant points without traversing the intervening space, thus you will be moving at a rate much faster than the constant speed of light but time will not vary for you in this.

Just as causative electricity today is directed over wires to a light bulb, certain healing techniques supposedly involve unblocking and/or redirecting "healing-energy" along pathways within your body, ...but is this a correct or necessary process? ...for you can heal by selecting all of the constituents you desire and vitalize or energize them by living anew, such that the healing or change is emergent. Just as the universe is not limited by causal, directed energy, neither are you, ...for you are filled with emergent-energy, ...which is local/non-local and capable of being either directed or everywhere present.

Stop limiting yourself to causative beliefs, energies, and healings!